DIGITAL PROJECTS

- USNewsMap.com. Built in collaboration with Georgia Tech Research Institute, this website brings a geospatial perspective to searches in the Library of Congress's Chronicling America newspaper database. Featured on Slate.com and in the Washington Post. A winner of the NEH Chronicling America Data Challenge.

- The Invasion of America (invasionofamerica.ehistory.org). Between 1776 and 1887, the United States seized over 1.5 billion acres from America's indigenous people by treaty and executive order. The Invasion of America shows how by mapping every treaty and executive order during that period.

Featured on Slate.com, Vox.com, the New York Times, the Washington Post, Aeon.co, and elsewhere. Over 100,000 unique viewers within six weeks of launching.

Adopted by the White House ConnectED initiative for use in public schools throughout the United States.

(<https://www.whitehouse.gov/issues/education/k-12/connected>).

Appears in “Nation to Nation,” the exhibit on treaty-making at the Smithsonian’s National Museum of the American Indian, and in “Into the Future: Culture Power in Native American Art,” at the Museum of Indian Arts & Culture in Santa Fe.

- IndianNation.org. A “Facebook of the dead,” this site contains a webpage for every one of the 237,000 native peoples who appear on the 1900 Census. Employing a simple user interface, it invites visitors to upload relevant letters and photographs, contribute biographical and historical information, and participate in online discussions.
- Pox Americana (pox.ehistory.org). Based on data collected by Elizabeth Fenn for her award-winning book Pox Americana, this interactive map contains nearly four thousand searchable references to the great smallpox epidemic of 1775-82.
- Mapping the Early American Population (in development). This interactive map will show the changing population of native peoples, African Americans, and white colonists between 1500 and 1800.
